Bank of San Francisco Names Veteran Banker, Michael De Vivo, as Chief Credit Officer

SAN FRANCISCO – Feb. 16, 2018 – Bank of San Francisco, the modern Bay Area community bank that supports the entrepreneurial goals of people, businesses and nonprofits, today announced that it is expanding its leadership team with the appointment of banking veteran, Michael De Vivo, as Executive Vice President, Chief Credit Officer. De Vivo joins Bank of San Francisco with more than 25 years of banking experience and has held leadership roles at community banks and larger financial institutions including Bank of the Orient, Trans Pacific National Bank, and U.S. Bank.

“We are delighted that Michael has joined the team, as he brings to the bank much expertise in credit administration, loan portfolio management and underwriting,” said Bank of San Francisco President, Wendy Ross. “As we execute our accelerated growth strategy, we will rely on Michael and our experienced underwriting team to maintain the highest standards for credit quality, while remaining flexible and relevant in our marketplace.”

“I am excited to be a part of the disciplined credit culture and entrepreneurial spirit of Bank of San Francisco,” said De Vivo. De Vivo is a Bay Area native and currently resides in San Francisco. He earned his bachelor’s of science degree in economics from Santa Clara University.
