Bank of San Francisco Opens Loan Production Office in Walnut Creek

SAN FRANCISCO – April 2, 2019 – Bank of San Francisco (OTCQX: BSFO), a forward-thinking community bank serving Bay Area businesses, nonprofits and individuals, announced the opening of its first Loan Production Office (LPO) in Walnut Creek, California.

The office is staffed by three full-time bankers: Senior Vice President and Relationship Manager, Ron Fulop; Vice President and Relationship Manager, Erica O’Leary; and Commercial Banking Associate, Martin Sanchez, each of whom has deep experience serving businesses, nonprofits and individuals in the Bay Area. The team is overseen by Bank of San Francisco Executive Vice President and Commercial Banking Manager, Felix Miranda.

Miranda and his team bring diverse depository, cash management and commercial lending options to the market, including working capital lines of credit, as well as commercial real estate, equipment, business acquisition and business expansion loans. Our bankers offer tailored solutions to meet each client’s unique banking needs, while demonstrating swift, local decision making and market knowledge.

“Expanding into the East Bay is a natural progression for our bank as we continue to increase our presence throughout the Bay Area,” said Miranda. “The Loan Production Office will enable us to better serve clients in the East Bay, which is a key market for us.”

The office is located at 2121 N. California Blvd., Suite 850, Walnut Creek, California.

Bank of San Francisco clients are welcome to visit the Walnut Creek office to speak with a relationship manager about deposit products and loan options, sign documents, or utilize the office’s conference rooms, pending availability. Seminars and local events will also be hosted at the office. To be notified about future Bank of San Francisco events, please email info@bankofsf.com.
